

Black Hawk where Safety Is Key

To some kids a super hero wears a cape and flys in the air, Well not to me my super hero drives a 18 wheeler and delivers goods all over the world he is a real life santa clause and clark kent mixed into one...This man im describing is my dad and he is a "Truck Driver...He not only takes pride in his job while he is on the road but also when he is at home...There isn't a time that if a fellow trucker happend to call for help that he wouldn't stop what he's doing to help them out in any way possible. He is a all around team player and that is what makes me proud of him. With him being gone all the time i worry about his safety on the road, you never know what is going on in the mind's of the other drivers , but if there is one thing that my dad instils in me it's that safety should and will always remain his top priority. He says that safety should start with how he keeps his own truck maintained both inside and out. Sometimes i wonder if he is going over board with things but i know in the trucking world there is no such thing, thats why when he is home both me and my sister try to help him with whatever it is he needs help with, our favorite thing is helping him with the washing of the truck, because not only do we get to get wet, but we also get to use our water guns to squirt soap on the spots that daddy misses. Who knew that being safe and helpful could be so much fun. So with all this being said this is why TRUCKERS are super safe superheros who rule our roads.

By; (Iralyn Pasquarelli)

Daughter of Vincent Pasquarelli

Age; 8

PODS OTR